

4	C is the only correct answer A is incorrect because the magnitude is the sum of the squares not the difference B is incorrect because the magnitude is the sum of the squares not the difference and a tangent is required for the angle, not a sine. D is incorrect because a tangent is required for the angle, not a sine.	1
---	------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------	---